HEBER CITY — Wasatch County Planning Commissioners Monday night voted to recommend approval of the controversial Mayflower Development Project, which plans construction of 2,500 homes in Heber Valley over the next 17 years.

The final hearing, conducted at Wasatch County Middle School, was delayed while the opposing parties, Newpark Mining Company and Mayflower, conferred. It will now go to the county commission for consideration.

Bob Mathis, county planner, presented the final documents to the planning commission with the recommendation that the commission approve the project.

After clarification from Wayne Petty, attorney for the developers, an arrangement to seek approval from the sellers of the property, the planning commission approved the project. Under consideration for the past five months, the project has been delayed for studies of building density, as well as the location of school sites and a resolution of problems concerning a hazardous waste pile.

Developers say the project will result in construction of 2,500 dwellings and creation of 1,500 jobs.

Gordon Mendenhall, Wasatch County resident, voiced the opinion of many residents, saying, "The area needs the jobs the project would bring."

Two powerful Moslem militias publicly renewed their support for Lebanon's peace plan as government troops searched for suspects in a wave of bombings in mostly Moslem west Beirut.

Beirut news media said anti-aircraft guns in Syrian-controlled areas of Lebanon fired but Israeli officials denied the report.

The Shiite Moslem Amal militia and the Druze Progressive Socialist militia issued a joint statement Tuesday pledging their support to Lebanon's Syrian-backed security plan and political and economic reforms.

"I want to advise that we are not witnessing a political crisis, but rather a simple restructuring of the top administrative levels of the government," Monge said in a brief address to the nation Tuesday night.

Wasatch County Commissioners Approve Mayflower Density Plan

Wave 16 Aug 1984

HEBER CITY—The Wasatch County Planning Commission approved the density determination for the Mayflower Resort in a special hearing held on Monday, August 13, in the Wasatch Middle School.

The vote was unanimous, after Wasatch County Planner Bob Mathis presented evidence that the developer had in fact worked out some problem areas as seen by the Planning Commission in a previous hearing held in April of 1984.

The Planning Commission refused to pass an earlier presentation because of some real problems that the developer had apparently overlooked.

County Planner Mathis pointed out that a study had been conducted which pointed out the development would not make the present landfill reach capacity prematurely. The study was conducted by the developer, and clearly warranted no alarm to county residents to filling the dump early.

The developer and the Mining Groups had been urged by the county to work together in trying to bring about a resolution to the mining conflict.

The groups were still working on a decision late in the afternoon of the day of the meeting, however, a signed agreement was handed to the commission.

Commissioner Pete Coleman said that he was exceptionally pleased with the way that the two groups worked together, saving probably thousands of hours and dollars. He told the group assembled that this type of cooperation was very important to the development coming where it is today.

This approval gives the developer the number of units that can be planned on the property.

The next step for the developer is to finalize the plans and seek final approval before the project can begin.
